DELAWARE.

The Final Struggle Will Come.

By Cable to THE SENTINEL.
LONDON, May 5.—Moderate newspapers and the public in general are inclined to approve the present of settlement, as it will allow England time in which to put her army and navy in perfect fighting order for the final struggle, which a majority believe is certain to occur. There is a sudden evidence of reports in the papers of armaments both here and in Russia, but preparations will probably continue on both sides.

PENJDEH THE PRIZE.

LONDON, May 5.—The Standard says: "No doubt is now entertained that the arrangement between England and Russia includes the surrender of Penjdeh to Russia."

THE SUEZ CANAL.

LONDON, May 5.—The Suez canal commission has exempted Egypt and Turkey from compliance with the clause which entitles all acts of hostility in the canal and forbids the landing of troops upon its banks. The exempted powers are, however, forbidden to land troops along the canal unless necessary for the defense of Egypt. Several powers made certain reservations.

LONDON CALLED HOME.

LONDON, May 5.—In the house of commons this afternoon, Mr. Gladstone in answer to questions, stated that Sir Peter Lumsden and Colonel Stewart had been ordered to come home immediately.

DUFFERIN RESIGNS.

LONDON, May 5.—It is rumored on the London stock exchange that Earl Dufferin has resigned as viceroy of India. The Globe says the so called adjustment of the Anglo-Russian dispute is a poor shift which amounts particularly to nothing more than a truce for averting a collision and which will result in nothing but the transfer of the difficulty from Gladstone's shoulders to those of his successor.

AN ALLIANCE TO TRANSIT ACROSS.
By Cable to THE SENTINEL.
PANAMA, May 5.—It is reported that a treaty has been concluded between the government of Bogota and the minister of the United States in respect to the security of transit across the isthmus. The Colombian and United States governments will co-operate to maintain the freedom of transit against all attempts to obstruct it.

PRESTON ESCAPES.

GREAT DISASTER.

An Old Building Falls on 500 People.

By Telegram to THE SENTINEL.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Early this morning two houses on Atlantic street, in Brooklyn, fell in with a crash. A number of persons are reported killed and others seriously injured.

The Abbott building on State street, used for manufacturing purposes, together with the building in the rear are destroyed. The building was undergoing repairs, and one of the props under the girders gave way, when the entire structure collapsed, burying the workmen beneath the ruins. A fire then communicated with the front building.

But fifteen workmen are supposed to be in the ruins.

The building was five stories high, twenty-seven years old and inflammable. When a part of the walls fell the rest took fire. About 500 employees were in the building, many of them girls and women. They were panic-stricken and many were lost who might have been saved if they remained cool. Four firemen were injured. The loss is estimated at $300,000. The building was owned by Nathan Cushing, of Boston. It is now believed that thirty lives were lost in the Brooklyn disaster.

APRIL LOSSES BY FIRE.

By Telegram to THE SENTINEL.

NEW YORK, April.—The Daily Commercial Bulletin of May 5 estimates the aggregate loss by fire in the United States and Canada in April at $7,750,000. This is at a rate of over $105,000,000 for the year. As the average fire loss in April for ten years past has been less than $5,000,000, it will easily be seen the Bulletin says, that this scourge of fire has fastened itself upon the country to a degree which is out of proportion to the increased value of property and is becoming alarming enough to demand attention from all property owners.

VINCENNES, April 4.—Fire broke out in this city this evening in the agricultural ware house of G. B. Bailey, which spread to an adjoining row of frame buildings in the rear. The opera house caught next and the postoffice also was on fire, though manfully fought, it soon got beyond the control of the fire department. The Odd Fellows hall, a handsome three story building, Spiegel, Gardner & Co.'s furniture warehouses on Water street, Clure's residence and gun store, and several other properties adjoining were destroyed. The opera house is gone. One hundred thousand dollars worth of property has already been destroyed. Evansville has been telegraphed for aid.

By an accident the note to the father was not delivered till too late to negotiate with the criminals. At the expiration of the second day the father found the body of his child in his court-yard horribly mutilated. A twelve-year-old sister, on seeing her brother's corpse, fell dead. HIS LOGIC.

Hon. Henry Watterson Sends an Important Message to the Courier-Journal.

He Sustains and Defends the Policy so far Pursued by President Cleveland,

And Paints the Chief Executive as He Pleasantly Sees Him in Official Life.

WATTERSON

Tells His Opinion of President Cleveland.

By Telegram to THE SENTINEL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 4.—

Mr. Henry Watterson, who has been here for the past week will tonight send the following to his paper as expressive of his impressions of President Cleveland and his administration: "A slight attack of some eyes suggested a visit to Washington and having intrigued the executive and department treatment for nearly a week it has occurred to me that a brief account of some impressions of the administration may not be without interest to the readers of the Courier-Journal. On a certain occasion Artemus Ward stepped in front of his canvas and pointing to a passing scene, said to his audience: 'Ladies and gentlemen—These are horses.' It was only this morning that the artist came to me with tears in his eyes and exclaimed, 'I can conceal it no longer from Mr. Ward, they are horses.' In its entire utterances and appointments the administration has spoken to the country. I can conceal it no longer. For my part, I have never doubted this in the least. If I had been given to the making of it, I could not better have suited myself. I have been so well pleased that I have been content to stay at home and play at philosophy, leaving others to play at patronage, quite satisfied that the president and eminent and accomplished men with whom he has surrounded himself might be trusted to give us a civil service, capable and clean, to handle the public business with fidelity and efficiency and to discharge equally their obligations, both to the people and the party. Personal content and opportunities for getting at both sides of the points of criticism and dispute have strengthened these original impressions, and I am happy to say that the case of some eyes with which I started from home has entirely disappeared. The president is less reserved and a more likable man than I had been in the habit of thinking him. He is at once exact and exacting, but there is beneath his unmitigable business-like purpose and exterior, a downrightness of spirit and an engaging candor, which came out strong for very little provocation, and which save his manners from severity. Genial is hardly the word to describe the sunny side of him. For he is a serious man, and a hard-worked and hard-working man, but he has the gift of appreciating a simple school boy love of fair play, and a repose altogether unaffected and complete and singularly lacking, both in criticism and vacuity. I observed the latter of these admirable qualities in Miss Cleveland, whose rapid advancement and elevation to the highest social honors and duties have in no wise disconcerted her, and who will add one name to the very short list of ladies who have dignified and adorned the mistresship of the executive mansion. Her brother is not so deeply or seriously read as she; not so much of a doctrinaire, if indeed a doctrinaire at all, for I should say he has been a student rather of men than of books, but he has an undeniable genius for command and for one of so little ostentation is the most unpromising subject of familiarity imaginable. His weight and reach of brain have perhaps never been tested or measured. He has yet to put forth his full mental powers and resources. Time, which develops, can only disclose the nature and extent of these, but there is one thing about him which nothing can obscure, which shows itself in all he says and does, and which is based upon all his aspect—that is character—and the older I grow and the more I see of life and men the more respect I have for character when brought in contrast with intellect. Many a man called dull and slow has by honest purposes and intellect will, enlightened by nothing more luminous than plain good sense, the offspring of every day experience, conferred inestimable blessings upon his kind, while the history of the world is full of examples of curses wrought by brilliant corrupted and genius misapplied. Mr. Cleveland is a plain, sober man. There is nothing dramatic or sensational about him. He has not, like many politicians, a long conscience and short memory. His hates and his loves are few, positive and sincere. He has shown himself abundantly able to say 'no' and yet as I have seen him, no man has a livelier wish to gratify the wishes of others. He wants to do the right thing and the kindly thing, and there is not the smallest doubt that since his election that he has been inspired by the truest spirit of justice, and the most conscientious sense of duty, equally loyal to his great place and to his party, asking no favors and looking to his work to vindicate itself.

Very great forbearance and a patient temper should be extended by the public to such a public servant. He selected his political advisers by the rule of fitness and he has inspired them with his own business-like spirit. The department are in hands most uniform and methodical. In every one of them there circulates the atmosphere of the workshops. They say nothing of the practical benefits and utilitarian performance and promise. All this has a moral value incalculable in itself—a sort of democracy, and much needed at that.

The attack of Eustis upon the administration seems to me equally unjust and unwise. As long as senators and representatives insist upon sharing the patronage of the government, they should be willing to share its responsibilities. To-day the president is just two months in office. There has been no attempt to shape a policy. The (thankless) duty of hearing the appeals and considering the claims of aspirants and the friends of aspirants, has consumed all the time. Appointments mean disappointments, because for every place there are a dozen or more applicants and for each of which he fills the president must take the risk of making one traitor and eleven enemies. No one understands this better than Mr. Eustis, who is a deliberate and thoughtful man, and hence it is a matter of surprise to those who know him, that he should break with the administration upon a simple question of patronage. There is little reason to doubt that when congress assembles he will find himself in close agreement and sympathy with it upon all the leading issues of the times, so that he will be placed in the awkward situation of having his approval and support forced from him in spite of his personal hostility—a circumstance which whips the advantages of the controversy over to the side of the president. The Louisiana senator indeed may yet get a temporary profit out of this at home, albeit it is by no means certain that he will. Lost or fall by its administration it can not afford to quarrel with this upon matters of detail or lightly to criticize it. There will be time enough to discover it when it violates its pledges. In the meantime the Democrats should remember that it is composed of Democrats; that the Democrats who composed it have their rights with the rest and that no one of them has given the smallest reason for anybody to distrust them. I have encountered but one spirit here and my opportunities for forming the judgment have been the most ample, and this is a spirit of loyalty to the party and the country. I will stake my life upon the sincerity of this, and I assure the disappointed and the doubting among the Democrats that if the president should go faster than he is going he would surely run his bark ashore. One story is told that starts out to please everybody and in pleasing nobody. This administration is trying to do its duty. Based on all sides by complications and badgered day in and day out by importunities, it has kept its temper passing well and has made no more mistakes than are common to newcomers in office and not so many as might have been expected.

When the president's train was near Mount Hope station, Maryland, returning from Gettysburg, about 8 o'clock this evening, three pistol shots were heard in rapid succession as from a revolver, and a flash of the weapon was seen within two or three feet of the moving train. It is probable that some enthusiast has deposited this method of celebrating the president and that the demonstration was only intended as a salute. It created amusement and gave rise to some jocular comment among the passengers, but since the return of the train the rumor has spread through the city that the president was shot at. The president expressed himself, however, as having passed a pleasant day and having been very much interested by what he has seen and heard upon the battlefield of Gettysburg.

THOMAS JEFFERSON built a small observatory at Charlottesville in 1825. Now on the site of that there stands a new $64,000 observatory, endowed with $75,000, and with a new 26-inch telescope that cost $45,000. Of the sums mentioned Leader J. McCormick gave $100,000, W. H. Vanderbilt $25,000, and the alumni of the University of Virginia the remainder.

IT IS SAID THAT MR. TARDIFF'S always frigid style of oratory has become colder and more nonchalant than ever. He speaks, except on rare occasions, as an official duty, apparently, rather than from any other motive, and seems, in fact, to take a pleasure in showing that as it was not by mere talk that he gained his unique position, so he need not imitate the loquacity of his followers.

NEW YORK, May 5.—When Dr. Douglas went to General Grant's house last night there seemed to be some cause to fear that the night would be a restless one, consequently the doctor staid all night. Contrary to expectations General Grant slept yesterday one hour on his bed, which is longer than he has slept in his bed for months, he had more sleep yesterday than he has had for weeks. Col. Fred Grant says he is feeling quite well this morning.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

Big Strike on the Rio Grande Railroad.

By Telegram to THE SENTINEL.
DENVER, May 5.—Specials from Gunnison and Grand Junction say that promptly at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, in obedience to instructions from headquarters, at Denver, all members of the Knights of Labor in the employ of the Denver and Rio Grande quit work at Gunnison and the round house and freight house were closed. No freights were allowed to leave the yards. All shops at Grand Junction are deserted. At Salida the yards are filled with hundreds of loaded freight cars, which are not allowed to move. The strength of the strikers is estimated at 1,000. No serious trouble is anticipated.

THE MIND CURE.

A Boston Professor Scouts Christian Science.

Boston, May 5.—The Congregational professor, Storow Fowler, read a paper on the subject of "Mind Cure" or "Christian Science," which was loudly applauded by the ministers and the leading Congregationalists in Boston and vicinity. Professor Fowler said that his ideas and knowledge of "Christian Science" were the results of his own observation and thinking, and were not gathered from books or works of other gentlemen.

"I recognize," said Mr. Fowler, "the strong hold Christian science or mind cure has taken in this community." After giving the claims of Mrs. Eddy, one of the leaders in the mind cure, he says: "While there are elements of Christianity in her system, it is non-sensical to call it Christian science. There are, in fact many persons who enter into it whose trouble really exists only in their minds."

"Do these scientists really heal?" I have not seen a case that I should call healing; let them heal one blind man and they will establish their claim. I know a man who had gout, and would place his foot on the chair and swear at his toe. This would be followed by immediate relief. Now that was not a cure but simply the influence of mind over the body and on the other hand it was not a Christian science. That system is nothing but a sham and cannot stand the test of practical life."

THE BILL POSTER'S WAR.

This morning Col. John Scott's paste brigade covered the circus paper on the wall at the southeast corner of Berry and Barr streets. This wall was decorated by G. Mr. Scott does not court this war, but says the wall is his.

FOUND A CORPSE.

Francis Fox Instantly Killed by a Thunder Bolt.

There was a terrible casualty at the farm home of Francis Fox, east on the New Haven turnpike, this morning. During the progress of the storm, between 5 and 6 o'clock, Mr. Fox went to the stable, near his house, to care for the horses and stock housed there. During this time lightning flashed and the reports were deafening, but Mrs. Fox took no notice of the storm until the prolonged absence of her husband aroused her fears, and proceeding to the stable she found Mr. Fox a corpse. He lay over the manger and except a slight discoloration of the face no traces of the fatal thunder bolt were visible. Mr. Fox was sixty-three years of age and leave a wife and daughter, Mrs. Robert Renfrew, of this city. He formerly was employed at the Bass foundry as a blacksmith, and he is quite well known in this city. His home is just the other side of Wm. McIntosh's home on the turnpike.

Coroner Dinnen held an inquest this afternoon and seems to doubt the prevalent opinion that Mr. Fox was struck by lightning. He rather inclines to the belief that heart disease produced death, but Mr. Fox never was known to manifest any symptoms of a disease of that nature, therefore the matter remains somewhat in doubt, as a post mortem examination was not made. Mr. Fox was a member of the Baptist church and was universally beloved and respected. His body will be interred at Lancaster, Pa.

THE ELECTION.

The Democratic Ticket Elected by a Round Majority.

This is a very quiet election, contrary to expectations, but the fact may be accounted for by the continued rain, which fell at intervals since early morning. The vote is light and in a few wards the friends of defeated candidates worked against the straight democratic ticket, but accomplished little. The indications are that the regular democratic ticket is elected by a good round majority. In a few wards the democratic councilmen are pushed pretty hard and predictions as to the result are even. It is democratic weather and our party had good organization in all the wards, save where factional councilmanic fights menaced success.

Another Notable Decrease.

The statement of East-bound shipments for the week ending May 2 shows another marked decrease of tonnage, owing in great part to the near approach of the opening of navigation. The shipments East-bound by all the lines out of Chicago were 51,788 tons, against 60,315 tons for the week previous, a decrease of 8,527 tons. The Pittsburg road carried the bulk of freight, 15,693 tons, and the Nickel Plate road 3,370 tons.

A VICIOUS TYPO.

Max Young Pursues His Wife With a Big Meat Knife.

A telephone message reached the jail this morning, that Max Young, a printer employed at the Gazette office, was searching for his wife to kill her. The people live on Madison street and last night had a quarrel. Young picked up a big meat knife and made a vicious lunge at his wife, who fled in terror from her home. The woman sought shelter at 86 Wallace street, in front of which place her husband paced all night. This morning Mrs. Young telegraphed for her father, who is en route here from Dark county, Ohio. When he arrives she will begin proceedings against her husband. Sheriff Nelson is searching for Young, but at noon the man could not be found. A few nights ago he was involved in a quarrel at Gillett's place and the domestic earthquake is probably the finish.

Niagara a Public Park.

Governor Hill, of New York, at the last moment signed the Niagara park reservation bill, and that great natural wonder will be wrested at last from the destructive utilitarianism that hides its glories, and from the speculators who have for years exacted an exorbitant tribute from the sight-seeing public. The various schemes for exorbitant money from travelers, which have been invented by Niagara property owners, challenge belief, and a general feeling of relief will be experienced the world over at the announcement that the approaches to the great cataract are to become public property. The Wabash and Nickel Plate roads will run a series of excursions to the falls this summer.

Discriminating Against Toledo.

The Toledo board of trade have sent two gentlemen as delegates to New York complaining that the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific railroad is being operated in a manner detrimental to the interests of the city of Toledo by the diversion of traffic from the main line of the Wabash, which runs from Logansport to Toledo. They claim, we understand, that through freight is diverted to the leased line of the Wabash, from Peru to Detroit, and that the diversion is made by the receivers to make the leased line earn its interest charges, because the friends of the receivers hold the securities of the leased line.

Assessing National Banks.

Attorney-general Ford this morning rendered an opinion which will be of particular interest to national banks and the counties in which they are situated. He informs the auditor of state that national banks should not be taxed at a greater rate than other moneyed capital; that national bank shares are only taxable in the city or town where located; that the real estate owned by a bank is to be assessed separately and the assessment deducted from the assessed value of the stock; that a shareholder is entitled to deduct his home file indebtedness from the assessment against his stock.

Starting the Mayer House.

The north end of the burned Mayer house is in a dilapidated way and guards cross the sidewalk to shy people from the toppling walls. To-morrow the fire department force and street commissioner's men will tear the house down, in accordance with the resolution of the council condemning the ruins as dangerous to travel and health. A nasty stench arises from the debris and the determination to clear it away is commendable. The hotel is an old land-mark.

We wish to say to the ladies living in the west part of the city that the street cars run within one square of our place and for the small sum of ten cents for car fare they can have the full benefit of our beautiful and cheap millinery.

CATARRH

Diseases Tending to Consumption, Symptoms, Effects, Treatment and Cure.

Dr. Nicholls

Robinson House,

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Among the list of chronic diseases which affect the human frame Catarrh is the most prevalent, most offensive and most productive of discomfort, and of a variety of distressing and dangerous complications.

Its earliest and most prominent symptom is a discharge from the head, varying in its nature in different cases, and even in the same individuals at different times. It may be a thin, colorless, orid fluid or a glary, starch like substance. Generally, however, it is a thick purulent or mucopurulent matter, either ash color, greenish yellow or a deep green tint occasionally streaked or flecked with blood. So copious and offensive is the discharge in many cases that the patients express their belief that their heads are one mass of corruption.

"HAWKING"

Most of the discharge passes backward, either dropping into the throat, or collecting as a tough, viscid tenacious phlegm, behind and above the soft palate in the passage between the throat and the head. Its lodgment embarrasses respiration, and creates a constant and almost insupportable desire to relieve the discomfort by drawing the offensive substance into the throat by a loud inspiration through the nose, so as then to be able to eject by a disagreeable "hawking."

OFFENSIVE BREATH.

In the more advanced stages the discharges are generally of an offensive odor, causing great annoyance to one's friends and to the patient himself, while his sense of smell remains. This annoyance from the odor becomes almost beyond endurance, more especially when the disease assumes the form of ozema, and the delicate bones of the nose become diseased.

DEFORMITY OF THE NOSE

In neglected cases, when the bones of the nose become diseased, not only is the offensiveness of the breath greatly increased, but there is a liability to serious personal deformities, among which is the flattening of the nose.

FATAL EFFECTS OF CATARRH.

The swallowing of catarrhal secretions deranges the functions of the stomach, causing indigestion, loss of appetite and health. Debility, deafness, paleness, lamitude, headache and disturbance of mind soon follow. In some instances the mental affection is one of irritability, the patient being unduly annoyed by all the little perplexities of life. In others the prominent feeling is that of melancholy and depression of spirits, when the invalid can see no hope in the future for himself or his affairs.

CONSUMPTION AND DEATH

Catarrh affections unchecked by treatment are prone to extend by continuity of surface along the natural air passages to the substance of the lungs, thus causing consumption and death. In this connection it should also be remembered that the air which enters the lungs of a catarrhal patient is, every breath of it, poisoned by exhalations from the foul secretions of the diseased surface. By such air the blood cannot be properly purified and made fit to impart healthy vigor in its unending circuit to all and every part of the animal mechanism. One would suppose that this consideration alone would be sufficient to induce every person thus afflicted to make early application for relief.

TREATMENT AND CURE.

By the system of treatment which Dr. Nicholls has adopted and pursued for years with uniform success, a complete and permanent cure of this repulsive disorder can be effected. This he has demonstrated in thousands of cases, representing the disease in every form and all its various stages of development. His applications are made to reach the diseased parts in the most direct and positive positive manner, instantaneously penetrating every cell and cavity of the head communicating with the nostrils, and subjecting every portion of the membrane to the healing action of the remedy employed, with the most beneficial results, and without causing the least pain or unpleasant sensation.

So effective is this plan of medication that a single application is generally productive of decided relief. The affected cavities are thoroughly cleansed from accumulated morbid matter, the offensive smell is removed, and relief from other troublesome symptoms is almost immediately experienced. The discharge soon diminishes, irritation is allayed, the inflammation subsides, ulcerations are made to heal and finally a radical and permanent cure is effected.

All Diseases of the Eye and Ear successfully treated by Dr. Nicholls. A permanent cure guaranteed in all chronic diseases.
